IHBC's New Interactive Home Page launched

The IHBC formally launched the new interactive home page for its website today. The page provides a regular news update on key issues for the sector, creating opportunities for everyone to contribute updates that might be of interest to the sector.

IHBC members and the press will be able to get e-mail updates, while anyone can check the page for updates as often as needed.

IHBC Director, Seán O'Reilly, said 'It's a great day for the IHBC, especially as we are providing this new resource during our 10th anniversary celebrations. IHBC members and the wider public now have the opportunity to communicate directly with the huge range of people that benefit from and work with our historic places. Hopefully everyone will look to this page for news, and use us to speak to the widest interests in the historic environment. We can't carry all the news, but we'll do our best to make sure we keep people up to date on what matters most in historic environment conservation'.
