HESPR NEWS & TENDER ALERT!£456K costed opportunities this week*Self sufficient city - a post-covid design for a new city in China

India Block writes in Dezeen:

Self-Sufficient City by Guallart Architects is a concept for a housing development in Xiong'an New Area, China, which would be able to produce its own energy and food during another coronavirus lockdown.

Spanish studio Guallart Architects included greenhouses for growing food, large sloping roofs covered in solar panels, and workshops filled with 3D-printers in its design.

Its scheme won the residential and communities category in a competition to design new urban typologies for Xiong'an New Area run by the local government.....

"We developed this project during confinement," said studio director Honorata Grzesikowska.

"The entire team worked from home and we decided to include all those aspects that could make our lives better."....

"We cannot continue designing cities and buildings as if nothing had happened," said Guallart Architects.

"Our proposal stems from the need to provide solutions to the various crises that are taking place in our planet at the same time, in order to create a new urban life, based on the circular bioeconomy, that will empower cities and communities." ...
